

TILLMAN DOMOTICS

Redefining Home Automation

Tillman Domotics is an exciting new home technology specialist offering seamlessly managed packages of advice, design, supply, installation and aftercare, yet with the benefit of a team with years of quality experience

When Matthew Tillman and Matt Symons set up Tillman Domotics in October 2010 their aim was to redefine home automation. 'We call our services Domotics,' says director Matthew Tillman, 'because we wanted to clarify and sharpen what it means to provide audio-visual integration for the home.'

'In the last 10 to 20 years there has been an explosion of demand for home technology as well as a bewildering choice of AV system integration companies. We saw a gap for a more service-orientated specialist that provides the best possible care for the client.'

Drawing on a wealth of experience in the industry, Matthew and Matt have between them 20 years of knowledge working for pioneering home automation and technology firms. Their staff at Tillman Domotics also have a vast pool of knowledge in system design, equipment selection, programming, installation and that difficult-to-acquire sense of what really is best for the client. In fact, much of their new surveying work comes from clients who have been disappointed with a competitor's poorly designed and executed installation.

Focusing on residential projects from £20,000 to £1 million and upwards as well as super-yacht new builds and refits and boutique commercial work such as the recent cutting-edge installation at Rizon Jet's FB0/ VIP Terminal at Biggin Hill, Tillman Domotics pledges to take the headache out of technology for its interior design and architect clients as well as the end-user. Life has changed and the way we use technology is probably the major factor in that change. Tillman Domotics is your trustworthy home automation specialist, always ensuring that their installations are as future ready as they can possibly be.
